A PICTURE FROM LIFE.

The hair from the brow with simplicity parted,
The lips in repose, yet curved,
As if the young life for a time had deserted
The delicate form it nerved:
To quicken the sembiance that gives to my fancies
An image to brighten and linger around,
Reflecting in glory the truth that enhances
The fair open light of the brow it has crowned.

Not a beautiful face, not a pretty face, even,
But deep in the lifted eyes—
Great eyes that you could not but love and believe in—
A look of such power lies,
To fasten your own, and to speak—without seeing
Their answering look—to your spirit, through them;
To waken new thoughts and impulses to being,
And these, like a judge, to approve or condemn.

And thus if their gaze, from a shadowy entrances,
And searches the hidden deeps,
What power must dwell in the varying glances
The soul that has lit them keeps?
To play 'neath the lashes whose curving is real,
To flash into others and image them back:
What must be the face, if I meet my ideal
In this, and so perfect as nothing to lack.

And yet, if the smile that is pictured so fairly,
Must change as ourselves do change:
The eyes be uplifted in quiet so rarely,
Their light would grow dim and strange:
I flushing and paling with flashes of feeling,
And every emotion from triumph to fear,
The face should be 'reft of the calmness revealing
The peace of the heart, I can read in it here.

Then let me retain in remembrance forever
The light of its look alone,
As, fixed by the hand of a master engraver,
In Heaven's sereneness shown.
Whatever may darken its earthly existence.
The spirit, I pray, may look up from the rust
Of earth, to a future more bright in the distance,
That keepeth it still in its shadowy trust.

[From the St. Louis (Mo.) Republican.]

EARLY LIFE OF H. P. LE CONNER.

BY HIS UNCLE.

NO. III.

[EXPLANATORY.—What was intended to be the abrupt termination of this biography is fully explained in the following affectionate epistle:

ST. LOUIS, March 8, 1868.

DEAR UNCLE—Dry up. Your cussed nonsense in the MISSOURI REPUBLICAN is making me the laughing stock of the whole world. It is all well enough for you, whose head is blossoming for the tomb, and for whom the world has no honors left; but think of me, your aspiring but helpless nephew, and imagine my situation! Do you suppose anybody cares how I used to mount mules, or haul logs, or play marbles, or what the phrenologist had to say about my head? I have learned to keep my mouth shut; why don't you do the same? Write to me and state candidly what the REPUBLICAN pays you for the history of my life, and I will pay you three times that amount if you will keep it out. I am willing to die a natural death, but I object peremptorily to being murdered in the very front and face of civilization by my own uncle. Therefore, brother of my revered father, quit. Write one more letter if you choose, and bring the thing to a decent close. Be dignified. Don't call me "Hans Patrick" and "my nephew," and such bosh as that; speak of me as Le Connor. Remember, I am a great man now, and must maintain my dignity. Don't, for the sake of common sense, let your next letter be as stupid as your former ones. People will begin to suspect that you are my father instead of my uncle. Yours, &c., H. P. LE C.

To my Uncle, Nubbin Ridge.]

NUBBIN RIDGE, KY., Feb. 30, 1868.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN.—The printing office which Le Connor entered, contained three "devils." In graduating with this class he stood fourth, from which, it will be inferred that he wasn't much of a devil, after all. Most of the apprentices enjoyed the advantage of having graduated from a House of Refuge before entering the printing-house.

Le Connor's merits were chiefly of a trival character, such as throwing ink-balls into the foreman's hair when his back was turned, coming down to breakfast an hour before anybody else, and remaining at table until the servants had done eating. Once the proprietors were short of paper. Le Connor had inked the forms, and was waiting patiently for an arrival of the blank material. Feeling weary, after a time, he laid down upon the press and fell asleep. On waking, it was discovered that his shirt, which happened to be a clean one, bore a correct print or the entire newspaper. No printing material arriving in time for the regular edition, he was sent around to the houses of subscribers and remained at each until the inmates read his shirt. This sudden manifestation of his usefulness acquired for him a good deal of celebrity and caused his salary to be immediately increased to three dollars a week.

Experience shows how uncertain an indication is the rank of a printer's devil of his future eminence. Le Connor himself predicted that the devil in his office would be hung. The first year of the war verified this prophesy.

Le Connor was discharged from the printing office in 1861, and immediately entered the United States service (21st Ill. Vol. Inf.(as Second Lieutenant. I have heard that he distinguished himself on many occasions, but one in particular. During an action he heard the command from some quarter of somebody's regiment. "Scatter, boys, your Captain's wounded." Le Connor was the first man to scatter, and he has been scattered ever since. He was always a very dutiful officer, and never lost but a moment in obeying an order.

Le Connor's aunt was very uneasy about him from the day he entered the service. Her principal fear was that he would resign and come home. When the first intelligence reached us that he had left the army and was on his way to our house, she fainted outright, and was seized with a severe attack of sickness. Fortunately there was no doctor within reach, and she recovered. While he was in the army Le Connor wrote to me frequently. He wrote in all twenty-eight letters. In twenty-seven of them he wanted to borrow money.

[History—The Twenty-First Illinois Regiment was organized by S. S. Goode, of Decatur, and he officiated as its Colonel five weeks. The regiment was raised under a bill passed by the General Assembly, authorizing the raising of ten regiments to receive pay from the State for thirty days, and after that to be mustered into the United States servlce, or otherwise, at their option. The regiment went into camp at Mattoon, and was subsequently removed to Camp Yates, at Springfield. A few days after their arrival at Camp Yates, every officer received his commission except Col Goode. He immediately repaired to the office of the Executive, and sought an interview with the Governor. It is here reported almost verbatim, memory only being at fault:

Goode—Why did you refuse to commission me?

Yates—Because you are a drunkard. (Very good, considering its source. Dick had probably not received his regular rations that day.)

Goode—I have organized this regiment; we have done without arms long after the other nine regiments were equipped; I had all I could do to prevent a riot at Mattoon because you would not furnish the soldiers with bread to eat; I have as much military skill as any officer in the regiment; the men have elected me their Colonel, and I claim my commission.

Yates—If you had the ability of Gen. Scott I would not make you Colonel of this regiment.

Goode—Who is to be the Colonel, then?

Yates—Grant, of Galena.

Goode—Who the h—ll is Grant, of Galena?

Not being personally acquainted with the parties, I shall not attempt to answer a question which his Excellency deemed it unnecessary to answer. Goode was a deserving man in many respects, but he was not the right kind of person for the position he sought.

Grant took command of the regiment in the latter part of June. (The troops left Springfield on the 4th of July and marched into Missouri.) When Grant made his appearance and was known as the Colonel of the regiment, very few of the men, probably not over two hundred, offered to re-enlist. The regiment was composed almost entirely of Democrats, and the idea of a Republican Governor refusing to commission the man whom they had elected Colonel was anything but pleasant to them. Grant was in a deal of trouble, and it was not until John A. Logan, who had always been a Democrat, came out and harangued the men for an hour and a half that enough of them could be pursuaded to re-enlist to secure the Colonel in his commission. Logan (not Washburne not Yates) and a Democratic regiment gave Grant to the world. The latter, so far as is known, has never claimed any especial credit for its achievement.]

While in Missouri, Le Conner met an old friend who had formely been a fellow-apprentice with him. This gentleman had eleven unmarried sisters [the other one was married] and Le Conner immediately became engaged to every one of them. The consumation of these engagements was unavoidable postponed owing to the unexpected circumstance of his receiving a leave of absence, but there is a prospect of his fulfilling all yet if he keeps on.

Immediately upon leaving the army, Le Conner's long cherished idea of becoming a farmer was realized. Unable to secure any other kind of employment, he readily accepted a position as a "hired hand," to do general farming, at seventy-five cents a day, with board and washing. While filling this position he worked like a slave—nay, more—he worked like two slaves, He tried this kind of life about four hours, at the end of which time [having purchased a bottle of strengthening cordial, ad interim], upon balancing his account, he discovered that he was worse off than when he began. In the commencement he hadn't a dollar in the world, and when he left off, if salt had been a penny a bushel he could not have bought enough to have pickled a jaybird.

The history of Le Connor's subsequent career, of his triumphs and defeats in the great battle of life, is a part of the familiar history of the country. Those who would post themselves more thoroughly with regard to his brilliant achievements need only to consult hotel registers, the account books of tailors, the free list of theatres, and the records of those who are exempt from drafts and taxation.

This letter bears the date of a birthday that I am patiently waiting for. and hoping every reader of the REPUBLICAN will live to see it, I remain, &c., ——

Receiving Sealed "Proposals."

A chap at Louisville issued a leap year invitation, and sent the following notice to contractors for publication in the Courier:

A Melancholy Story.

A few days since, says the Cincinnati Commercial, there came to this city a poor, friendless, suffering woman, sadly wasted by the ravages of relentless chronic disease. She had with her two children. About a year ago she left her home, near Lancaster, Pennsylvania, to join her husband, a private soldier named Riker, stationed on the Plains near Omaha. She reached him, and managed to support herself by washing for the officers in his regiment—for his pittance would not suffice for both—and remained with or near him until his term of service had expired. This anxiously looked for event took place about a month ago, and as soon as he received his pay, amounting to some $600, they and their two children left the barracks for their home in the East.

They boarded a train on the Union Pacific Railroad, and after travelling in this direction awhile, the cars stopped at a station, and Ricker and a companion got off to obtain some refreshments. Before they could return the train had resumed its journey and left them behind. When night came on his wife, fearful of the safety of her husband, stopped at a small town and the next morning went back to where her husband had been left. She found him a corpse. He was murdered by his companion for the money he had in his possession, and the villain who committed the deed was far away when she arrived. She sorrowfully buried him and with a heavy heart once more turned her steps homeward. Long before she reached this city her slender means were exhausted, and she was dependent on fellow-travellers for her daily bread and transportation. On arriving here she went to the Commercial Hospital. The Managers of that institution were willing to receive her, but icould not, under their rules, receive the children. She refused to separate from them, so she repaired to the Police Station House, the officers of which procured accommodations for her and succeeded in raising money sufficient to send her home.

VERY few mechanics are ever sent to our States Prisons. There is nothing like a good trade to keep a young man out of mischief.

THE FIRST WEDDING.

THE BIOGRAPHY OF A HAPPY COUPLE.

A great many years ago—long before it had entered into the mind of man to build the Tower of Babel, or lay out the city of Buffalo, or do many other foolish and wicked things—there dwelt in a distant land a gentleman named Adam, whose surname was Firstman, who became enamored of a beautiful young lady known as Eve B. Guild. His attentions appear to have been accepted and reciprocated by the young lady, and she became convinced that he was "the only man who she could ever love," if we may judge by the following communication which she made to John Milton, who followed the rather singular vocation of advertising things "lost and found" upon her father's estate: "Confirmed then I resolve Adam shall share with me in bliss or woe; so dear I love him, that with him all death I could endure, without him live no life."

This being equivalent to the modest declaration that the lady is willing that her lover should begin to "pay her board," arrangments were immediately made to have the union consummated, and in the absence of any official clergyman, the ceremony was performed in the most simple and unostentatious manner, in the beautiful garden of Eden. The auspicious moment having arrived, the groom took the white and little hand of his bride, unadorned even by a "plain gold ring," and, affectionately imprinting upon it a kiss, reverently said: "This is now bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh, therefore shall a man leave his father and mother and cleave unto his wife, and they shall be one flesh." No cards. Thus was joined in the holy bonds of wedlock the first couple of which we have any knowledge. There was no "rotund spectacled" father-in-law, no interested mother-in-law, with her legendary smelling-bottle, and no dear unmarried aunt present.

Nor was the ubiquitious "Jenkins" there to "write up the affair," so the readers of the Daily Post Diluvian could not take in, with their coffee and cakes, next morning, a detailed account of what was done, and said, and worn, at the wedding, much to the regret, doubtless, of the jolly Post Diluvians. But Jenkins, had he been there, would have found it difficult to have got up a sensation article; for there was an entire absence of all obstrusive display and reckless extravagance upon the occasion refreshing to contemplate. The outfit of the groom was plain and simple, perhaps the most noticeable thing about it being the absence of the "dress coat," prescribed on such occasions by "our best society." The bridal costume was marked by perfect simplicity and the absence of all expensive and extravagant adornments. There must have been something very becoming in this costume, as certain ladies, in fashionable life, at the present day, imitate it as closely as possible, when in "full dress."

Dispensing with the practice, now so prevalent, of indulging in a wedding tour, and not caring to publicly proclaim themselves as newly-married by the occupation of the bridal chambers in the hotels and on steam-cars, the happy couple settled quietly down to enjoy the cares of married life in the Garden of Eden, and were noted for their plain and unpretending manner in living. They kept no carriage, hired no opera-box, gave no costly entertainments, but contented themselves with the simple, unexpensive and satisfactory pleasures of enjoyment incident to their circumstances and surroundings. Adam was a good husband; he spent his evenings (and a good many of his days) at home; he had no business engagements "down street" after dark, nor did he belong to a club. He spent his evenings at home with his wife, whom he never humiliated by coming home late o'nights with a "brick in his hat" and a very ambigious dialect. He did not even color a "meerschaum," but retained in his cheeks the color which else had been transmitted in deeper hue to the bowl of the pipe. His sleep was undisturbed by the effects of dissipation or the nightmares of the stock market; hence was calm and refreshing. Undoubtedly he was an early riser and loved the "dewy morn"—as we are sure he did the "gentle Eve." Eve was, doubtless, a very beautiful woman. Milton testifies that "grace was in her steps, heaven in her eyes, in every gesture, dignity and love." She deserved, if any of her sex ever did, the credit of caring little for the blandishments of dress. Her tastes and habits were eminently domestic, and for her in truth there was no place like home.

Her amusements were few; she cares little for opera or ball, but she probably attended the matinees of nature's songsters in the open air, where ushers, programmes and reserved seats were unknown, and it is not unlikely that she frequently accompanied Adam to see the menagerie or collection of animals in the garden. We know that Adam went, for the Scriptures tell us that upon one occasion he called the animals names.

Eve, so far as we know, spent little time and money in "shopping," and it is not probable that she had even heard of "Stewart's," the Mecca of American women. She never sent Adam to a restaurant for his meals on Mondays because they were "washing days," nor made his life miserable by reason of a semi-annual "house-cleaning." She was not a heartless woman of the world, nor did she ever indulge in gossip and scandal; she had no affiliations with Mrs. Grundy and kindred spirits, and never troubled herself about the ownership of any "extra pair of stockings" dangling from her neighbor's clothes lines. Eve was frugal, contented and happy, moving serenely in first circles, and, undoubtedly, Adam loved her devotedly. Mr. Milton, who appeared to have esteemed the family highly, intimated as much, and we have no doubt that he knew. We regret to add that misfortune eventually came upon this happy family. Eve unfortunately became involved in a transaction in fruit—apples, principally—in which Adam was involved, and their property, including the "homestead," passed out of their possessions, and they were obliged to seek a residence elsewhere. From this time we know little about them, except that Adam, by careful attention to his diet, managed to live to the age of nine hundred and thirty, and died in the prime of manhood, his life being shortened, doubtless, materially by the loss of his property. Whether Eve survived him or deceased first we cannot say, but presume she did.

THE FIELD OF BLOOD.

The soil of Bladensburg, Maryland, has a bloody record. It has been the scene of many a refined murder in days past. One who visits the place now will find the field green with verdure, which a few years since was trampled by the feet of men arrayed in deadly hostility. Here, on a beautiful grass plot, surrounded by trees, forms made after the image of God came to insult nature and defy Heaven.

In 1814, Edward Hopkins was killed here in a duel. This seems to have been the first of these fashionable murders on this dueling ground.

In 1819, A. T. Mason, a United States Senator from Virginia, fought with his sister's husband, John M'Carty, here. M'Carty was averse to fighting, and thought there was no necessity for it; but Mason would fight—M'Carty named muskets loaded with buckshot, and so near together that they would hit heads if they fell on their faces. This was changed by the seconds to loading with bullets, and taking twelve feet as the distance. Mason was killed instantly, and M'Carty, who had his collar bone broken, still lives with Mason's sister in Georgetown. His hair turned so white soon after the fight as to cause much comment. He has since been solicited to act as second in a duel, but refused, in accordance with a pledge made to his wife, soon after killing her brother.

In 1820, Commodore Decatur was killed here in a duel by Commodore Barron. At the first fire, both fell forward, and lay with their heads within ten feet of each other; and as each supposed himself mortally wounded, each fully and freely forgave the other, still lying on the ground. Decatur expired in a few days, but Barron eventually recovered.

In 1821, two strangers, named Lega and Sega, appeared here, fought, and Sega was instantly killed. The neighbors only learned this much of their names from the marks on the gloves left on the ground. Lega was not hurt.

In 1822, Midshipman Locke was killed here in a duel with a clerk of the treasury department named Gibson. The latter was not hurt.

In 1826, Henry Clay fought his second duel with John Randolph, just across the Potomac, as Randolph preferred to die, if at all, on Virginia soil. The latter received Clay's shot and then fired his pistol in the air. This was in accordance with a declaration made to Mr. Benton, who spoke to Randolph of a call the evening before on Mrs. Clay, and alluded to the quiet sleep of her child and the repose of the mother. Randolph quickly replied, "I shall do nothing to disturb the sleep of the child or the repose of the mother." General Jessup was Clay's second.—When Randolph fired he remarked "I do not shoot at you, Mr. Clay," and extending his hand, advanced toward Clay, who rushed to meet him. Randolph showed Clay where the ball struck his coat, and said facetiously, "Mr. Clay, you owe me a coat." "Thank God, the debt is no greater." They were friends ever after.

In 1832, Martin was killed here by Carr. Their first names were not remembered. They were from the South.

In 1833, Mr. Key, [son of Frank Key, and brother of Barton Key of Sickles notoriety] met Mr. Sherbon, and Sherbon said, "Mr Key, I have no desire to kill you." "No matter," said Key, "I came to kill you." "Very well, then," said Sherbon, "I will now kill you," and he did.

In 1845, a lawyer named Jones fought with and killed a Dr. Johnson

In 1851, R. A. Hoole and A. J. Dallas had a hostile meeting here. Dallas was shot in the shoulder, but recovered.

In 1853, Daniel and Johnson, two Richmond editors, held a harmless set-to here, which terminated in coffee.

In 1853, Davis and Ridgway fought here; Ridgway allowed his antagonist to fire without returning the shot.

FOR AUDITOR GENERAL:
HON. CHARLES E. BOYLE,
Of Fayette County.

FOR SURVEYOR GENERAL:
GEN. WELLINGTON H. ENT,
Of Columbia County.

A BRIEF absence from home, as well as an accumulation of job work since our return, has not only delayed our paper but has prevented our usual attention to the various departments of it. For the same reasons we have again failed to publish our receipts, not having had time to arrange them. We hope to hear from MacShane next week in regard to his Altoona trip, and otherwise expect to make up for all deficiencies in our present issue.

Startling Revelations.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald, under date of April 14th, thus telegraphs to that paper:

History records numerous instances of conspiracies to overthrow existing governments or to change ruling dynasties, but they have generally been the work of a few restless spirits, who have kept their real designs concealed from all but their immediate associates, and thus have led their followers blindly on in the path of revolution in ignorance of its ultimate goal. The Jacobins of France were bold in their action; but even with them when their revolutionary fires were first kindled only the men who applied the match knew fully the extent of the destruction that was designed to follow the conflagration. The radical conspiracy now under full way at Washington, is probably the most reckless that has ever sought to strike at the life of a strong and beneficent government and to reduce a happy people to a state of anarchy.

Events have occurred here within the past two or three days which render in certain that the ultimate object of the men who are now striving to control the Republican party in Congress is to effect an entire change in our republican form of government, and to substitute in its place a dictatorship more absolute and arbitrary than that of Robespierre and the Commune de Paris. The apparent triumph of the impeachers on Saturday last, when the Senate, after giving the broadest license to the Managers in regard to the admission of evidence against President Johnson, refused to the latter the privilege of examining General Sherman on points vital to the defence, imparted such confidence to the Radical conspirators as to tempt them to cast aside all caution and to boast openly of their power and of the manner in which they are resolved to exercise it. In the barrooms and over the dinner table principles were avowed which, under other governments, would speedily consign their exponents to a felon's cell. The objects of the revolutionists were declared to be the entire overthrow of constitutional republican government, as a failure, proved to be such by the war of the rebellion, and the substitution in its place of a so-called "Government of the People," under the delusive Jacobin cry of "Liberty and Equality." The means and process by which this end is to be accomplished are set forth as follows:—

The conviction and removal of Andrew Johnson, and the installation of Ben Wade in the Presidency for three or four months before the commencement of the next Presidential term.

The election of Grant as President and Ben Wade as Vice President and President of the Senate, by the aid of martial law in doubtful States, if necessary.

The virtual abolition of the Supreme Court of the United States, by stripping the judiciary of the power to pass upon the constitutionality of any act of Congress relating to reconstruction or to the business of the government.

The extension of the term of office of the President, Grant, the Vice President, Wade, and the present United States Senate to ten years from the 1st of March, 1869, on the plea that a constantly recurring change in the government is harmful in the existing condition of the country and was one of the main causes of the late war of the rebellion.

The unlimited inflation of the currency, through the instrumentality of the national banks, so as to throw upon the country an enormous amount of paper money, by means of which the people are to be kept in a state of excitement and good humor, and to be amused and made satisfied with an apparent prosperity.

This is the end and aim of the Radical conspiracy, to which impeachment is only one of the preliminary steps. The dictatorship of Grant will be nominal only, and the real power will be in the Senate, with Ben Wade at its head. The appointments made by him during his brief term of power will be carefully selected from the tools of the conspirators, and the patronage and influence of the office holders will stand at the back of the revolutionary commune. Grant will not have the power, if he had the disposition, to change a single feature in the programme—a single creature in the action of the drama—for the Senate will hold him in a vise stronger than they had prepared for Andrew Johnson. With the latter out of the Presidential office, no voice will be raised in vetoes to expose the true character of Radical legislation, and acts will be passed which will strike down what little of protection yet remains to the people in the barriers of the Constitution. With a paper currency flooding the country speculation will run wild, stocks of all kinds will rise, railroad schemes and all the wildest projects that ingenuity can devise will find ready votaries, and in the general fire and smoke of the great revolution the radical dictatorship will be made perpetual. The united power of Grant, the Senate and the national banks is relied upon to crush out all opposition and to enforce a Reign of Terror to which the experience of 1862 and 1863 will be but a trifle. The conspirators cite the case of Louis Napoleon in support of their argument that boldness only is required to turn into an absolutism a rule commenced under the guise of republican liberty.

The immediate admission of the Southern States with their negro constituencies and negro representatives, will follow the first successful steps of the conspiracy, and then the vote of New York in the House of Representatives will be nullified by that of South Carolina. The real object of the radical conspirators is no longer a secret. Men may shut their eyes to the truth, but the revolution will not go backwards, and its last acts, which are here foreshadowed, will come as surely as military rule, negro supremacy, the usurpation of the constitutional powers of the Executive, the destruction of the Supreme Court, and finally, the impeachment of the President of the United States, have one after another followed the close of the war of the rebellion.

Sergeant Bates' Journey.

Interview between the President and the Sergeant—Interesting Account of His Travels through the South—Expressions of Loyalty and Kind Messages to the President from all Sections.

WASHINGTON, April 16, 1868.

Sergeant Bates called upon the President to-day to perform what he considered a very agreeable duty. That duty, he said, was to deliver to the President the kind messages for the Chief Magistrate of the nation which he had received in the swamps and in the woods along the stretches of pine forests through which his route now and then lay, at the lonely farm houses and in the villages, cities and towns. "Tell the President," said a gray haired man, 'that we are praying for him." "Say to him," said husbands, 'God bless him." Many, very many, begged the Sergeant to tell the President that their hope was that Heaven would bless Andrew Johnson in his efforts to secure to them their rights in the old Union. "At Richmond, Virginia," continued the Sergeant, "a fine looking old lady, working a passage through the crowd, came to me as I was making my way out of the city, and with the tears coursing her cheeks, said, as she took my hand, 'Tell Andrew Johnson that he has the earnest prayers of the matrons of Virginia for his welfare and happiness.' Gray haired men, trembling with age, invoked upon President Johnson Heaven's blessings. Just beyond Montgomery, in Alabama, my flag was decorated with flowers and a laurel wreath by a young lady, who said to her mother, as she returned to me my colors, 'I wish I could send with Sergeant Bates a bouquet to President Johnson!' They would dismiss schools to meet me, and many of the little girls would want to kiss me and to wave my flag. My rooms have been decorated with evergreens, and in North Carolina girls strewed my way with flowers and pinned bouquets upon my breast. In passing through North Carolina and Virginia, I had a bouquet in my hand every hour of the day. I honestly believe, sir, that in every State through which I passed in my long journey I could raise a thousand men for the defence of the flag as quickly as I could anywhere in the entire Union. I have taken by the hand dozens of ex-confederate soldiers whose warm grasp, quivering lips and moistened eyes could not lie. In Georgia, for instance, I met a man who had served in the rebel armies, and who had been watching for me along the road. He had been engaged in chopping wood. I accompanied him to his home, distant about two miles. On the way he told me the grave of his brother, who had fallen in the rebel cause, was not far from the roadside. I went with him to the spot. He stood upon one side of the grave and I upon the other. A plain wooden head board marked the place, and as I was reading the inscription he asked why such a bad state of feeling should continue to prevail—Reaching his hand over the grave of his brother, I clasped it; and will any one say I did wrong in taking by the hand one against whom I had fought, but who now was willing to stand by the old flag?"

At the request of the President the sergeant explained the circumstances under which he had undertaken the long journey which he has just concluded. "Persons," said he, "made assertions which I believed to be both foolish and unfounded. I contradicted them, saying that I did not care for their individual opinions; but as perhaps thousands believed as they did I would make a proposition that, if carried out, would disprove their theory. I thereupon made an offer to do what I have done. I did not think my proposition would be accepted, nor did the principal person of those to whom I refer think I would dare to carry out my plan. He, however, at once accepted my offer and dared me to fulfill its terms. He had declared, for instance, that if the government would withdraw the military forces from the South and leave the flag flying the Union soldiers would hardly be out of sight before the colors would be torn down and trampled in the dust. I replied that I was a poor man, that I was not in a condition to give me a dollar a day for my family while I was gone I would go to Vicksburg and would a'one, unarmed, and without money carry the American flag from that place to Washington. I was told that my life would not be worth a cent; that, indeed, I would never be permitted to leave Vicksburg alive. Articles of agreement were drawn up, and I was dared to sign them. I did so, and thus bound myself to their performance. I went home, thought over the matter, saw that was a novel enterprise and would attract some attention, but did not think it would receive the notice it has. I felt sure I would be treated well, and that the flag would be respected; but I had no idea the people would take so much pains to show their respect for the flag or that I would receive such an ovation. There was not, sir, during the entire journey a breath uttered against the flag or myself, whether in the rich man's parlor or the poor man's cabin; whether on the road or in the city, the old flag received the respect and homage of all, and I welcome and hospitality. I was determined to carry out the plan. I have done so, and when I reached Washington I had not a penny in my pocket. I did not know where to get a meal or where to find a resting place. I have had money enough offered me on the route to make me rich for life, but I have not accepted a cent, nor have I sold a photograph, as some have said. During my journey, Mr. President, I recaptured one of our flags without expending a shot. It was a flag that had been taken from us at Chancellorsville, and it was handed to me by an ex-Confederate soldier, who had preserved it at his home. Before I leave I will call on you to show you a sash presented to me by the ladies of Montgomery, Ala., and which I promised when I reached Washington you should see. I hope on Monday next to leave for my home, near Edgerton, Wis., where I have a wife and two children. The last work I did before I left was the cutting of two cords of wood. I left a tree partially cut, and I want to go home to finish it."

The Capture of "Romeo"---A Fearful Contest.

A Philadelphia paper of a recent date says: One of the most interesting, exciting and yet hazardous incidents which has occurred for many a day, was the recapture and conquering on Saturday last, of the huge Asiatic elephant, "Romeo," belonging to Adam Forepaugh's Menagerie, on the farm of James B. Miller, in Hatboro, a small unpretending village, twelve miles from this city, upon whose premises he has been quartered during the past winter, together with the white camels, dromedaries, horses and two other elephants belonging to Mr. Forepaugh's great Zoological and Equestrian combination, which will open in Philadelphia, next week.

It will be, no doubt, remembered by the majority of our readers, that this is the same elephant that killed his keeper, Mr. William P. Williams, last December, not long after going into winter quarters; the circumstances of which might not be uninteresting briefly to narrate in this connection.

Mr. Williams was in the habit, with other duties and cares, of washing and scrubbing the elephant every few days with warm water, the animal, at the same time, being chained firmly by securing both fore feet with a massive iron chain strongly fastened to rings, secured at the bottom of his spacious stall, which is built of solid masonry, of great thickness and strength, upon which rests the weight of a ponderous superstructure. From several circumstances that had transpired but a few days previous, such as the annihilation of a pet cat, the knocking down of a camel which happened to come in the way, Mr. Williams, his keeper, was advised to be on his guard; but having great confidence, he took no precautionary measures, and thus it happened that while he was in the act of procuring a fresh supply of water, with which to wash him, his back being turned, the elephant struck him a powerful blow with his trunk, prostrating him upon his face, breaking his spinal column and rendering him instantly helpless.

Immediately the elephant caught him with his trunk, threw him beneath his fore feet, gored him with his tusks, knelt upon him with his knees, literally crushing every bone in his body. At this fearful crisis, Mr. Miller and other members of his family, alarmed by the cries of the unfortunate man, came to the rescue, and, by means of forks, spears, &c., succeeded so far in diverting the attention of the infuriated monster from his victim as to extricate the dying man from his power. Mr. Williams, it is hardly necessary to add, lived but two hours after this sad event. Being securely chained, he was, of course, unable to do any further mischief, and in this predicament he has remained all winter, no person being able to conquer and subdue him. Of course, if permitted to remain so all the time, he would be heartless enough, but the traveling season for the menagerie approaches, and his lordship is needed somewhere else, and some means, therefore, must be devised by which he can be subdued and made available for the approaching campaign.

In this extremity Mr. Forepaugh was obliged to secure the services of his old keeper, Mr. Stuart Craven, who had been in charge of him before he was imported to America, and for six years since that event, but who, in consequence of declined health, was advised to travel in Europe, and about eighteen months ago sat out for the Orient, and wishing to combine profit with pleasure pursued his journey into the interior of Africa, Asia and lower Egypt, accumulated an extensive assortment of the most rare and curious animals, and also of the feathered tribe, among which were some of the finest specimens of African and Asiatic elephants, camel-dromedaries, &c., ever imported into this country, all of which have been recently merged into the mammoth menagerie belonging to Adam Forepaugh.

Mr. Craven, being an experienced animal tamer, was deemed the most advisable person to take charge of the recapture of "Romeo," as he is the only person who has ever succeeded in conquering and subduing this, the largest specimen of an Asiatic elephant on this continent. To this end, Mr. Craven proceeded on Saturday last, assisted by that fearless and intrepid animal performer, Mr. James Forepaugh, to Hatboro, accompanied also by an army of men with ropes, tackles and chains, to bring this monarch of the Oriental jungle to his haunches, who has been a kind of terror to that community ever since the unfortunate death of Mr. Williams.

Immediately on the arrival of his old keeper, although he had been absent about eighteen months, the elephant recognized him, became restive and defiant, made a fearful charge upon him with his trunk, with which, but for the chain by which he was strongly tethered, he would have instantly annihilated him. This was quite unexpected to his old keeper, but experience has demonstrated that once the elephant becomes enraged, he is just as quick to fight his best friend as those whom he has never seen. In short Romeo was complete master of the situation, and great apprehensions were entertained lest, becoming still more ferocious, he should snap his tramplers and make a great havoc among the spectators. To be prepared for this emergency, ropes and chains were made ready, and by the wisdom and discretion manifested by Mr. Craven, assisted by James and George Forepaugh, both hind feet of the monster were secured by chains which the infuriated beast proceeded to break like so many gossamer webs, floating in the air. These efforts were time and again repeated and as often baffled. Larger chains and ropes were brought into requisition, which in their turn yielded to the superior strength and prowess of the monster brute, which contemptuously spurned every effort used to capture him, until it was evident that some more effectual means and appliances must be resorted to in order to dislodge him from his stronghold. The chief point now to be accomplished was to so hamper and entangle his legs in the massive chains with which he was confined to the stall, so as to render him at once hors de combat. In this Mr. Craven, assisted by George Forepaugh, the renowned elephant hunter, was more than equal to the task.

By an adroit movement of a species of lasso, a large rope was looped around his hind leg, instantly tightened by a tripple fall-block, and by the aid of a large concourse of people, attracted by curiosity to witness the capture, he was brought to realize, for the sixth time of his life, that "Knowledge is power," and to its mandates he must sooner or later succumb before yielding, however, he made some desperate lunges at his keeper, and several times came near annihilating him with his trunk. It was hard for "Romeo," however, to kick against the goads. He gradually found himself in a rack which out-Heroded the palmiest days of the Inquisition.

In spite of himself he was finally brought down, to the no small delight of the spectators. But he was so obstinate and indomitable that he would not beg for mercy. When the elephant is subdued he usually makes his acquiescence manifest by a plaintive noise, which, those accustomed to the animal know and understand as well as a mother knows the cry of her child. All day Saturday was consumed, and Saturday night found him still obstinate. Sunday morning came and still he was unwilling to yield. However excruciating the torture, writhing all day Sunday in his galling chains, Monday morning came and with it a disposition to yield to the conquest. At nine o'clock Monday morning, Mr. Craven had him completely under his control, and never was a whipped spaniel more docile.

Loosing his chains the keeper found no difficulty in conducting the conquered monarch to this city, on Monday. As he will be on exhibition at Manayunk, Wednesday, April 1st, our citizens need have no apprehension of danger, as "Romeo," like Richard the Third, is "himself again."

Something of an adequate idea of the marvellous size of this mastodon of the animal kingdom may be formed when it was discovered, on weighing him after his capture, that the scales were brought down to FIVE TONS AND THREE HUNDRED POUNDS.

TERRIBLE RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—A terrible railroad accident occured on the Erie Railroad, sixteen miles west of Port Jervis, on Wednesday. The cars were thrown down an embankment some seventy feet, by the breaking of a rail.

Twenty persons were killed—seven burned to death and over fifty badly wounded.

The scene of the accident is thirteen miles beyond Port Jervis, on the Delaware Divison road. The side of the precipice is formed of jagged rock, and in the descent the cars were broken to pieces. At the bottom is a culvert through which flows a stream emptying into the Delaware.

The disaster was caused by a broken rail which threw the rear car immediately in front, and the whole were precipitated down the embankment. The cars on going over the embankment turned several times, before the bottom was reached, and were nearly demolished, and the sleeping car was entirely consumed by fire. The passengers immediately began to rescue the wounded and remove the bodies of the killed. Many of the latter could not be recognized. Seven persons were burned to death, and six others were killed by coming in contact with the jagged rocks. The wounded persons were placed in the train and sent to Port Jervis, which place was reached at 6 o'clock in the morning, when several surgeons were immediately summoned, and every thing was done to alleviate the sufferings of the injured. The bodies of the killed were left on the ground. Three children escaped with only slight injuries.

—A flock of wild pigeons twelve and a half miles long, recently flew over Wellsville, New York.

—Ten thousand dollars were recently paid in New Jersey for 150 bushels of seed potatoes of the "Rose" variety.

—A ewe near New Lisbon, Ohio, gave birth, a few days since, to a lamb with ten legs, ten feet, two tails and one head. The lamb was dead.

—The negroes have a bureau by which they are cared for. Where is the Soldier's bureau? Ask at the gate of a cemetery, or at the door of a hospital.

—James Hamill and Henry Coulter have agreed to row for the championship and $1,000, on the Schuylkill river; the match to come off on the 18th of June.

—The "high old court" seems determined to hear no testimony from any one who was in the President's confidence and who knew his motives in removing Stanton. The members of the Cabinet are to be prevented from testifying.

—John Melvin, whose body was burned at the late fearful accident at Port Jervis, was a brother-in-law of Peter Goodwin, of Erie city. Last winter he narrowly escaped being on board the train which was destroyed at Angola, missing it we believe from accident. He afterwards made the remark that he "could not have been born to be killed by a railroad accident." His sad fate proves how fatal was his mistake.

—Mrs. Harry Thomas, a lady of St. Louis, walked ninety-two miles in twenty-three hours and a half, ending at half past 12 on Tuesday. She started to walk one hundred miles in twenty-four hours, but failed, as above. She will make another trial.

WE ARE STILL MAKING A COMPLETE REVOLUTION IN TRADE, and selling every description of Dry and Fancy Goods, Plated Ware, Jewelry, Watches, Sewing Machines, &c., for the uniform price of ONE DOLLAR. We would impress upon our patrons that our Stock is not composed of second handed goods or Pawn Broker's unredeemed stock, but goods carefully selected direct from American and European Manufactories, the greater portion of which are MANUFACTURED EXCLUSIVELY FOR US, which fact enables us to offer our customers better Goods for the money than those who profess to be "Manufacturers' Agents," or than can be obtained in any other way.
The unparalleled increase of our business, and the endorsement of prominent business men and the press in general, is a convincing proof that we have adopted the fairest and most popular system ever placed before the public. We are the first who have attempted to make a "Revolution in Trade," by enabling the public to procure goods in small quantities at manufacturers' prices, thus saving the consumer three large profits made in passing through the hands of the Commission Merchant, the Wholesaler, and Retailer.
Send Clubs of ten or more, with ten cents for each descriptive check, and the getter up of the club will receive a present worth $3 to $300, according to number sent. ☞Send for our New Circular. We also pay agents the same commissions as allowed by the Company. Blank form of order, with price-list and "The Tea Cup," sent to any address.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

FOREPAUGH'S GIGANTIC MANAGERIE AND CIRCUS, which is advertised in another column, will make its first grand entree into Ebensburg, next Wednesday, April 29th.

We congratulate our citizens and readers generally, on having presented to them, for once in their life time, if never before, an opportunity of witnessing for the simple sum of fifty cents one of the grandest Equestrian and Zoological aggregations ever before collected together in one vast pavilion in this or any other age. We have conversed with several gentlemen and friends who have seen this mammoth exhibition, and all unite in pronouncing it the finest and most extensive affair ever before presented to the lovers of rare and curious specimens of the animal kingdom—accumulated at an enormous expenditure of time and money, gathered from the four winds of heaven and the habitable globe, at a cost of three hundred thousand dollars. The idea of seeing 22 cages and dens, filled with living wild animals, a collossal chariot car of emerald and gold, which cost above ten thousand dollars, 30 elegant and decorated wagons used for transporting the baggage required for this great show, the magnificent Band Chariot, the vast stud of Arabian steeds, trick horses and ponies, the monster war elephant Romeo, weighing over five tons, the petite calf elephant, Baby Annie, the herd of white camels, black camels and dromedaries, forming a grand retinue of wealth and pageantry in one solid procession nearly a mile in length, the richness and gorgeousness of which must be seen to be appreciated. We say whom one contemplates such a scene as that which will be presented on Wednesday next, it will be no wonder at all if half of Cambria county turns out en masse to witness it. We declare to our patrons that this is no humbug show. It is a legitimate Menagerie and Circus combined on a grand and magnificent scale, and yet so devised as to give persons an opportunity of witnessing the actors one hour and a half before the equestrian performances commence, as each is a separate and distinct affair, though but one price of admission is charged. We are therefore confident in recommending this great moral exhibition to the patronage of our citizens and friends. See advertisement.

In this connection we deem it but a common act of courtesy to say that we found in the agent of this mammoth establishment, Mr. H. C. Crum, a high-toned, genial, honorable gentleman—one with whom it is a pleasure to hold business intercourse. He assumes none of those arrogant, offensive airs which are too often put on by persons vested with a little "brief authority," but attends to business in a business way, and leaves the impress upon the minds of those having business with him that he is a perfect gentleman in the full sense of the word. It is well that such a first class exhibition is represented by such a first class man as Mr. Crum, and evidences that the coming show is perfect in all its appointments, and well worthy of public patronage.

BRIEF MENTION.—The new church building recently completed for the Disciples congregation in this place, will be dedicated on the first Lord's day in May, proximo. Elder Joseph King, of Allegheny, will be present. Preaching will commence on Friday evening, May 1st.——Mr. Evans' recitations at the Court House, on Tuesday evening, were of the most masterly character, and received the enthusiastic plaudits of the select but we regret to say very small audience in attendance. If our people had had an idea of the elocutionary abilities of Mr. E. and the pleasing character of the entertainment afford by him, they would not have remained away for any common consideration, at least.——As our farmer friends are about to commence their plowing, it is well enough to remind them that hillside and all other kind of ploughs can be had at the lowest prices at the Ebensburg Foundry. Also, plough castings and other articles needed by the farmer ——A Mr. McKinney was seriously crippled and a Mr. Weight somewhat injured by the explosion of a charge of powder at the lime kilns near Birmingham, Huntingdon county, on Tuesday week. The accident occurred while they were engaged in removing from a rock a charge of powder which failed to ignite from the fuse.——The Catholic Fair now in progress in Altoona we know from personal observation to be the most elaborately gotten up affair of the kind that we at least have ever witnessed. The display of fancy articles is really grand and extensive, and the attendance of visitors unsurpassed in numbers by any Fair that has ever preceded it.——Don't forget the Concert at the Court House on Friday evening next. Young America has prepared a rich musical feast, and everybody should go and enjoy it. The young folks deserve the utmost encouragement.

DEATH'S DOINGS.—The "fell destroyer" has been unusually busy the present Spring, and almost every day we hear of friends and neighbors being summoned from the stage of life. This week we publish four or five deaths under the proper heading, and have heard of a number of others of which no particulars have been furnished us. Among those we note with sincere regret the death of Mr. George M'Gough, of St. Augustine, this county. Scarcely ever has the news of death been so difficult to realize. Mr. M'G. was in the prime of life, and there are few to whom the world offered fairer prospects. He combined all the elements of true manhood. Kind and amiable in his disposition—genial in his habits—he united sterling common sense with an unusual amount of playfulness; yet to those persons who would mistake his gaiety for want of manliness, he was not slow in teaching a lesson of true courage and force of character that would silence the slightest insult.

His death was sudden. His friends at a distance were scarcely apprised of his illness until they were summoned to mourn over his remains. He leaves an afflicted widow and helpless family to mourn their untimely bereavement.

HOUSEWIVES, LISTEN!—Among the innumerable articles designed for household purposes, which have been introduced to our people by Mr. George Huntley, the "Universal Clothes Wringer?" of which a representation is given in our columns today, stands pre eminent. Is is the only Wringer with the patent stop, which prevents the cog wheels from flying out of gear, and it has been awarded the first premium at nearly all the State and other Fairs held throughout the country. Housekeepers should see the workings of this useful invention, as its merits will commend it to all who need a really excellent Wringer.

GODEY for May is as gay as ever. We have not had leisure to do more than scan the contents, but are quite satisfied it will compare favorably with any of its predecessors, or, indeed, with any other like periodical in the country.

A Negro Stabs a White Man with a Razor—Arrest and Escape—Killed in a Coal Mine—Leg Broken—Almost a Fire—Close of a Night School—Y. M. C. Association—New Bridge—Gone West—Police News, &c.

JOHNSTOWN, April 20, 1868.

Dear Freeman—An altercation between a young white man named John Price and three negroes took place on Franklin street last Tuesday evening. It is alleged that one of the darkies made an insulting remark to a white lady passing at the time, and he was remonstrated with by Price for so doing. High words ensued, but the parties were about separating when one of the negroes named Johnston drew a razor from his pocket and attempted to cut young Price in the neck, but the blow was warded off by Price interposing his arm, the coat sleeve only being cut. Johnston then made another lunge at Price, and this time succeeded in giving him a pretty severe cut in the thigh. The ebony colored individuals then fled, but two of them were subsequently arrested, and after a hearing one was released and the other held in the sum of $500 to answer the charge of assault and battery. In the meantime Johnston was captured in Indiana and brot to this place, when, after a legal investigation of his conduct, he was remanded to the lock-up to ascertain if any person could be found who would go his security, in the sum of $1,000, to appear at Ebensburg when called upon, to answer the charge of assault and battery with intent to kill. As the necessary amount was not forthcoming, it was decided that he should be conveyed to jail on Friday evening, but when the officer repaired to the lock-up to take charge of his prisoner he was rather dismayed to find him non est. It appears that an inebriated individual had been locked up during the afternoon, and had been located in the front part of that institution, but recovering sooner than was anticipated, he broke open the drawer of the office table, where the cell keys were kept, and liberated Johnston. A number of picks and shovels were stored in another cell, and by means of one of the picks the lock of the outer door was forced, and between five and six o'clock in the evening the prisoners departed, and up to the present hour have failed to return or send word as to their whereabouts.

A miner named John B. Davis, who was employed in one of the C. I. Co.'s mines, was killed by a fall of slate on Tuesday morning last, and his sad fate was not discovered until about ten o'clock that night, when a fellow boarder, becoming alarmed at his unusual absence, went to the mine in quest of him, and found the remains as stated. Davis was an unmarried man, a native of Wales, and had no relatives in this country. He had become possessed of considerable property in this place, and was shortly to have been married.

A young lad whose name has escaped my memory had his leg broken by falling thro' a hole in a bridge which spans Hingston's run at Minersville. A suit for damages has been instituted by the father of the boy, and there is a strong probability that the borough will have to pay dearly for their negligence in not keeping the bridge in proper repair.

A lady residing in Conemaugh borough arose very early one morning last week, and after lighting the kitchen fire returned to bed, but forgot to remove some shavings which were in close proximity to the stove. A few moments afterwards she detected an unusual amount of smoke in her bed-chamber, and looking towards the kitchen, was horrified to see, as she supposed, the house on fire, and immediately losing all presence of mind, broke out a flight of sash, and catching a couple of sleeping children, unceremoniously pitched them out. Fortunately the fall did not hurt them much, and with the assistance of a few neighbors the incipient conflagration was extinguished.

The Island night school, which has for several months past been taught with great success by Mr. A. C. Johnson, closed last week with a distribution of books among the scholars. This school was under the exclusive patronage of the C. I. Co., and has been of incalculable benefit to a large class of young men and boys who are compelled to labor for their living. The books were also furnished by the Company, and the presentation took place in the new school house on Washington street.

The preliminary steps towards the formation of a Young Men's Christian Association have been taken, and a committee appointed to effect a permanent organization. The great difficulty in securing suitable quarters for a library and reading room is the only drawback to the success of this commendable enterprise. If successful it cannot fail to accomplish much good.

A new bridge across the Conemaugh, to replace the old aqueduct, is now in process of construction. It will be entirely of iron, and will be the neatest and most durable structure of the kind in this vicinity.

I have heretofore neglected to notice the departure of Messrs. Henry Walters and Geo. Kohler, two of our oldest and most respected citizens and merchants, who have left this place to locate permanently in the West.—The best wishes of our entire community will follow these gentlemen to their new homes.

Our police have furnished themselves with neat and tasty badges, and will in a few days appear in new uniforms. The "war clubs" have not been visible of late, but as next Saturday is "pay day," they will doubtless be once more on hands, as a number of first class "scalp dances" will likely occur at that time.

Mr. A. Montgomery has been re-appointed Notary Public. SKU BAL.

EBENSBURG, April 20, 1868.

Mr. Editor—The turnpike hereabout, usually called the "store pike," which forms the principal street of our town, was constructed about the years 1819 and 1820. Prior to that time the means of communication between the eastern and the western portions of the State were very poor. The Frankstown road, which crossed the mountains on the southern side of the county, was the principal route that connected the valley of the Juniata with the valley of the Conemaugh. This was a very ancient road, and is frequently mentioned in the old provincial records. It wound down, and still winds down, what is called Cover's Hill, east of Johnstown, and enters the town at the head of Main street. Where the road led to the west of Johnstown I cannot say, but I have seen part of an old road in a field below Blairsville, and was told that it was the old Frankstown road.

The construction of the turnpike was at the time considered a great achievement. It opened up a vastly superior means of transit from one side of the mountains to the other, and over it for many years flowed the tide of immigration, which, like the "Star of Empire," westward takes its way. Towns and villages, most of which have since lost their importance, sprang up as if by magic along the line, and old fashioned hostelries, where entertainment for man and beast could be found, graced the roadside at every few miles. I incline to think, Mr. Editor, that in those old days there was more real friendship in the world, more truth and faith, more virtue and patriotism, and less of hollow pretension in men's hearts, than now.

After the construction of the canal and Portage railroad, it the first years of 1830, the largor part of the travel and traffic was cut off from the turnpike in favor of the new enterprise. In the winter season, however, when navigation on the canal was closed, the turnpike flourished without a rival. But even at all reasons the business on this road was considerable, and we well remember the flourish of trumpets with which the well-laden stage coaches were wont to announce themselves in villages along the route. The building of the P. R R., and other railroad lines through the State, was the death-blow to the prosperity of the turnpike. It was the smooth stone in the head of Goliah. The turnpike had completed its mission. The other day I had occasion to walk a few miles over this old road. I found the mile-posts torn down, roadside inns converted into quiet farm houses, and the road itself, even the great turnpike, in places overgrown with grass. The road was lonesome, and I felt like Tholaba among the ruins of Babylon. A few straggling footmen, and an occasional specimen of G. P. R. James' "solitary horsman," are now about the only representatives of the business of the old "stone pike." PEDESTRIAN.

WE call attention to the advertisement in another column of Messrs. Bailey, Farrell & Co. of Pittsburgh. The firm mentioned are doing a large and extensive business in the manufacture and sale of Water, Gas, and Steam Goods of every description. Their factory is at Nos. 20 and 22 Strawberry and warehouse and office at No. 167 Smithfield street. The machinery used by this firm is of the latest and most improved kind, many machines being covered by patents, and taken altogether, is well calculated for turning out goods of superior quality. Messrs. B., F. & Co. have on hand over one hundred different varieties and styles of pumps, ranging from a small cistern or farm pump to steam pumps of mammoth proportions. Their stock of fittings for iron, gas, and water pipes is the largest in the western country, consisting of over five hundred different patterns, while their stock of brass cocks and valves for plumbers and machinists' use cannot be excelled. By the use of superior machinery Messrs. B., F. & Co. are prepared to fill orders for lead pipe of any length required, all in one piece, so that farmers and others can lay lead pipe without the assistance of a mechanic.

Messrs. B., F. & Co. are energetic and reliable business men, and we would recommend parties interested in water, gas or steam goods to correspond with them.

TRIX.—One morning last week, certain people of Ebensburg were greatly agitated upon discovering, posted up on the porches, and pillars, and public places of the town, flaming handbills imprinted with the single word—"Trix." By general consent, it was determined that this cabalistic announcement meant that the Ku Klux Klan had had its dark and bloody agents at work—But it was afterward ascertained that Trix was only a harmless medicament, for sale at the drug stores. Moral—don't be humbugged. Moral again—when you go to buy dry goods, groceries, &c., don't be humbugged, but patronize R. R. Davis, High st.

GOOD-BY.—In a few days, Charles Dickens, Columbia's honored guest during the past three months, will return home to his own sea-girt isle. The people of New York said good-by to him through a grand banquet on Saturday last, and the people of Ebensburg will convey to him during the present week their regrets that he must tear himself away. It may not be generally known that Mr. Dickens originally intended visiting Ebensburg this winter, and we note it here. He was coming, not so much to read, as to see the town and its institutions, including particularly V. S. Barker's Cheap Cash Store.

IT is a fact worthy of note that in addition to the really superb stock of ready-made clothing to be found in the store of E. Leopold & Bro., in Johnstown, these gentlemen keep on exhibition an immense variety of samples, from which goods will be made to order. Mr. L. will guarantee a complete suit from any of the samples on hand, and within one week after leaving your measure with him. If the clothes are not a perfect fit no customer will be required to take them. Store on Main street, a few doors below the Scott House.

ONE of the neatest Photographic establishments in Western Penna. is the new room over A. Montgomery's store, in Johnstown, and probably one of the best artists in the country is the proprietor, Mr. Wesley Greene. We have seen some of the work executed by this gentleman, and for life-like correctness and beauty of finish we have never seen photographs which would excel the specimens shown us. When you visit Johnstown do not fail to call at Mr. Greene's photograph rooms and secure a correct counterfeit presentment of yourself.

ADJOURNMENT.—The State Legislature adjourned last week, and just previous to the final seperation one of the members rushed frantically to the speaker's stand and proposed that a vote should at once be taken upon a resolution he was about to offer.—The proposition in question read as follows: "Resolved, That the cheapest and best clothing in the State can be purchased at the Star Hall Clothing Store of James J. Murphy, Clinton street, Johnstown, Pa." Passed unanimously.

CHAM. ROBERTS has just been appointed sole agent for the sale of Grover & Baker's celebrated sewing machines. He keeps them constantly on hand, as well as the Singer sewing machines. Those wishing to buy a machine should not fail to call on him, as he sells them at manufacturers' prices, less the freight. Also, Grover & Baker's and Singer's needles, cotton, silk, oil, etc., cheap for cash. Call at his jewelry store, and if you don't buy a sewing machine, buy something else, as he sells cheap.

JUST ARRIVED.—Our readers will be gratified to know and feel that the warm weather has come at last. It reached us by the same train that brought the splendid stock of new goods to the renowned Thompson store, on High street. It promises to remain permanently, but the goods don't, as the latter will be sold very cheap, and of course will be sold very rapidly. Now is the time to pitch in!

EUREKA!—Tell me, ye winged winds, that round my pathway roar, is there some spot on earth where tradesmen cheat no more? Some sweet and sheltered nook, away from rush and crash, where clerks tell only truth, and sell goods cheap for cash? The rough winds answered quickly—this time more calm its roar—"The place that you are seeking is Hagle's Clothier's store!"

KATE CARSON, a colored girl residing in Lewistown, committed child murder, and then eloped for parts unknown.

DIED.

WILLIAMS.—In Cambria township, on the 14th inst., Mrs. Rachel D. Williams, wife of Thomas T. Williams, aged 32 years.

The deceased was a consistent member of the Bethel Baptist Church. She has left a husband and two children, besides a large circle of relatives and friends, to mourn her death. Her end was peace, and she has gone to be forever with the Lord. J. W. E.

MANTONE.—At Charleston, S. C., on the 15th inst., Mrs. Frances Mantone, only daughter of Mr. Felix Jacob, of Loretto, this county, aged about 23 years.

It is only a short year since the object of this notice was lead to the altar a beautiful and highly accomplished bride. The world opened bright to her youthful vision. Alas! the vanity of human hopes! The kind attention of a devoted husband, the filial care of an affectionate mother, who flew to her aid, travelling thousands of miles, on the first tidings of her daughter's illness—all could not save the victim from the touch of the destroying angel. We sympathize with her afflicted relatives and friends.

PLUMMER.—At Summerhill, on the 13th inst., of scarlet fever, Willie, son of James and Eunice Plummer, aged 10 months.

FLANAGAN.—At Chest Springs, on Tuesday morning, Mrs. Mary Jane, wife of Augustine Flanagan, and daughter of Mrs. —— Lloyd, of Ebensburg.

McDERMITT.—At his residence, near St. Augustin, on Tuesday, John Edward McDermitt, aged about 40 years.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

ANOTHER CURE FOR CROUP.—Dr. Trevitt, editor of the Columbus (O.) Crisis and an experienced physician publishes the following:

As this is the season of the year in which this infantile disease is most prevalent, we publish the following recipe, from the Paris Medical Gazette: "Mix one teaspoonful of sulphur in a glass of water, and give a teaspoontul of the mixture every hour. This disease is cured in two days, the only symptom remaining being a cough arising from the loose pieces of false membrane in the trachea."

EXTERMINATION OF COCKROACHES.—We have been greatly troubled for two or three years by roaches, the real, big, black fellows. By continued exertion we confined them to the vicinity of the furnace and range, but to exterminate them all sorts of traps and exterminators proved ineffectual. Somebody told us of Paris green, and it has done the work. We feel so rejoiced that we desire to give the knowledge to the public. Paris green can be procured at any apothecary store. Just sprinkle it round where "they most do congregate."

GREEN PAPER ON ROOMS.—The Journal of Commerce advises a correspondent as follows: We advise you to remove the green room paper at once. Undoubtedly your family are suffering from the poisonous arsenic dust which is detached from the paper. Green window shades, green paper, the green leaves of artificial flowers, green paints, articles of confectionery colored green, are all dangerous. We have analyzed wall papers which contained from ten to fifty grains of arsenic to the square foot.

LATH AND PLASTER SUPERSEDED.—A firm of Philadelphia builders are now erecting a hotel near Erie, Pa., in which thick strong paper is used to form wall and ceilings, in lieu of lath and plaster. The paper is put upon a backing of common hemlock boarding. By this new method all the walls and ceilings of a good-sized house can be put up in a very short time, no drying being required. The paper walls and ceilings are said to be much cheaper than the lath and plaster.

SCOURS IN CALVES.—As the season is at hand when farmers will be required to look after their calves, we give the following recipe, furnished by an experienced farmer for scours in calves: "The most simple and effective remedy is a tablespoonful of saleratus, if the calves are taught to drink (as they should be)—dissolve the saleratus in milk." If one does not cure, repeat until a cure is effected. I have never known it to fail if taken in season.—H. N. B., in Mirror and Farmer.

A FARMER says his wagon tires "wear out before they get loose," and the reason is, he saturates the felloes thoroughly with linseed oil before the tires are set. The felloes are placed in hot oil for about an hour, and are thus rendered perfectly water-proof, so that the shrinking and swelling that loosen the tire are prevented.
